THE OPERETTA. - Peabody Hall, last night, was again filled to overflowing, the Midsummer Night Dream Operetta proving an ample compensation for the discomforts of the weather and the crowd. A description of the performance would be difficult. Scenes of dazzling brightness, where beauty and grace of person embined with the brilliant paraphernalia of Baptist Church of Baltimore. fairy land, float through the mind of the reporter. Notes were out of the question during the exercises, for who could use his pencil in the presence of the Queen of the Fairies? The bewildering array of tarlatan, of wings and spangles and slippers, was confusing to the reporter's vision. Very beautiful indeed, but tar beyond his powers of description. The startling "thunder," which some one behind the scenes "played," and the ringing blows of the "Anvil Chorus," were well brought in. The parts were sustained with great vigor and completeness, especially those of the three gentlemen. As for the fairy beings who floated airly over the stage, their voices blended in such harmony, that separate criticism and complument is beyond us. Those who stood out prominently in point of costume and singing made themselves a name in the memories of Little Lily Penick, a sweet specimen of juveale beauty and simplicity, who might be called went through with her speechifying in a man- cine. her that took all hearts by storm. Looking up from the midst of her brilliant surroundings the petite infant spoke with an artlesness that surpassed art itself, her bright sunoy face unturned in eager effort to "sing it right." The captain, as a stage manager, is a suc cess, and deserves much praise for the getting up and the execution of this operetta. After the performance the reporter observed trustee in said deed named, will sell for cash, at one of the two young ladies who figured the public suction, in front of the Market House, one of the two young ladies who figured the on Royal street, Alexandria, Va., on SATURnight before in the German Dialogue talking to our reverend friend, the Rabbi, in the finest kind of German.
